

GARLANDS FOR JUDY

A vintage color photograph of Judy Garland is the background of the entire page. She is shown from the waist up, looking directly at the camera with a surprised expression. She has dark, curly hair and is wearing a bright yellow, textured sweater with red and white floral patterns. A red bow is in her hair. The background of the photo is a soft, out-of-focus landscape.

“Miss Show Business” was Judy’s first album for Capitol Records, and her first album in the LP era. Originally released in 1955, the album celebrated its 60th anniversary in 2015. The album was re-released on vinyl (see previous page) and it became the first Garland album available for digital download in HD format.

The sound on this release is fantastic! The album sounds about a million times better than it ever did. Be sure to click on the images below to purchase and download your copy - you won’t regret it!

One of Judy's lesser known and underrated performances is her effective portrayal of "Jean Hansen" in the 1963 film "A Child Is Waiting" co-starring Burt Lancaster.

The film had been remastered by Kino Classics and never looked better. This is its premiere release on Blu-ray, one of the few Garland Blu-ray offerings of the past year. Also included is an audio commentary by Tom Charity, author of "John Cassavetes: Lifeworks."

2010's "Judy Garland - Lost Tracks - 1929-1959" was such a success that JSP Records commissioned a "best of" single CD compilation.

All the tracks have been newly remastered by John H. Haley, including the famous 1935 Decca tests and three bonus tracks getting their premiere CD release here. The disc is, as with the other JSP Records Garland releases, compiled and annotated by Lawrence Schulman.

Oddly enough, this CD is one of only two major Garland CD releases of the year. The other CD is "Swan Songs, First Flights" which was released in Europe in 2014 and the U.S. in early 2015 (see next page).
